OBAMA CAMPAIGN STOPS AT RANGE FUELS

Governor Bill Ritter, Congressman Ed Perlmutter and Former Energy Secretary Federico Peña Tour Range Fuels

Denver, Colorado, October 13, 2008. Range Fuels welcomed Governor Bill Ritter, Obama Campaign Co-Chair and former Denver Mayor and Secretary of Energy, Federico Peña, and Congressman Ed Perlmutter to their Development Center in Denver during a stop on the Obama Campaign New Energy Economy Tour.

Capitol Solutions, Range Fuels' political consultant, secured the stop on behalf of their client.

As the innovator and leader in the cellulosic ethanol industry, Range Fuels is the first and only company to be on the verge of commercial production of cellulosic ethanol.

Range Fuels' Development Center includes a pilot-scale cellulosic ethanol plant that is using Colorado beetle kill wood to make ethanol. The plant is being used as the basis for its commercial plant being built in Georgia, and also serves as home to Range Fuels' R&D efforts. CEO Mitch Mandich and Vice President and Inventor of the process, Bud Klepper led Governor Ritter and the other dignitaries on a tour of the Denver plant.

Traveling throughout Colorado, the Tour highlighted three different Colorado businesses that exemplify Presidential candidate Barak Obama's comprehensive energy plan, which emphasizes reducing American reliance on oil.

After the tour, Governor Ritter, Federico Pena, and Congressman Perlmutter expressed their appreciation and admiration for the innovation and ingenuity shown by Range Fuels and their confidence in the company's continued success.
